SHORT And to the Point.

We will not detain you but a minute this week—not a week this minute. We have said that we make some of our clothing; that we buy from manufacturers of repute who make goods to our order, especially for our Kentucky Trade; that we PAY CASH for what we BUY and therefore buy for less than we could buy on credit; that we SELL EXCLUSIVELY FOR CASH and take no risks on collections in city or country, and that we can and do SELL FOR LESS than any other house can afford to sell.

NOW, all we wish to say further, at present, is that, having a reputation for the best goods and lowest prices, and for fair dealing, and in order to extend our trade, we GUARANTEE to furnish you clothing for the Spring and Summer of 1890 cheaper than you ever purchased similar goods, and to give you entire satisfaction as to style, fit and quality.

If you are not coming to the city soon, write us and we will tell you how to get what you want by express, without risk of misfit, or of paying for something you don't want.

THE FEMALE SPY.

And the Tortures She Underwent for Her Sweet Country's Sake.

My home was in the little village of F. Ohio, and for justice and diversion of young men organized an amateur theatrical. I was just 16, fair and delicate, and it was insisted that I should take the role of a girl in the play. It was surprising how much like a girl I looked—my most intimate friends could not tell me from my sister Emma. In discussing my feminine appearance, it was suggested that I would make an excellent army spy for some of the Generals.

The suggestion set me all afire with enthusiasm, and before a day had passed I had consulted an army officer home on furlough, and I got his assistance in securing a position along with the army of Gen. Sherman, then around Atlanta. I reported at army headquarters at once, and the General put me to studying the geography of the country around us, the position of the two armies, and in the meantime, I would dress in my female garb and practice in the art of female deportment.

A few days before Sherman swung around to Jonesborough I was notified to get ready and pass around the left wing of Hood's army, discover all I could and join the Union forces again in the neighborhood of that place. Before the light of morning had streaked the east, just three days before, I attended to every detail carefully as ever did a belle in dressing for the ball-room. After I was dressed I took the reins of my white and led my horse and felt my way until I arrived at an open piece of ground and a slight road that led I knew not where. Soon I struck a big road and then I mounted my horse in handsome female style, and with my sun-bonnet tied closely to my face, was soon skimming along a road which I knew led back to Atlanta and into Hood's lines.

After an hour's ride I ventured up to a little farm-house and hailed at the gate. The door was opened, and in the light of the blazing lightwood I could see a mother and three handsome southern girls. Their greeting was cordial and generous.

"Light, light and come in!" said the mother.

A feeling akin to remorse flitted across my conscience when I heard the kindly greeting, so free from suspicion.

"Can I put up with you for the night?" I asked, feeling that a woman caught traveling alone at night would, of itself, be cause to arouse the suspicion of a Confederate scout. "I am a belated traveler—a girl. My brother has been badly wounded at Atlanta and I am trying to make my way there to care for him."

"Come right in, come right in! Lucy, call old Pomp to take her horse. There, just throw your reins over them palings and come in—Pomp will take care of your horse."

I made my way into the cozy room and took the chair set by the fire for me by the mother as she remarked:

"Poor thing! you are chilled through by the night air. Throw on some light-wood, Mary, and Lucy, you good heart

OUR GREAT GAINS.

A Political Revision in Several States—Indications From Local Elections.

An occasional victory in local elections would be of no significance, but a succession of gains in local elections in different and widely scattered States means that public sentiment is setting in a changed direction. Within a month elections have been held in many of the Pennsylvania, New York and Iowa cities, and in several of the New York country towns. Two of these States are strongly Republican, and the third was carried by the Republicans in 1888. In those local elections in three States, including some of the Republican rural districts of New York, the advantage was very lengthy on the Democratic side. In the Fourth Congressional District of Philadelphia after a vigorous campaign on the tariff reform issue the Democratic candidate for Congress ran 2,700 votes ahead of his ticket. In several of the Republican cities the Democrats won. In New York the Democrats carried Rochester, which the Republicans have been carrying for 14 years. In several other New York cities the Democrats won. The Democrats now have 24 mayors of the 30 incorporated cities in the State, and they developed the most strength comparatively in the Republican strongholds. In the intensely Republican interior of the State the Democrats met with greater success than they ever did before. In 15 counties, 12 of which were carried by Harrison and Morton, the Democrats have elected 133 supervisors as against 87 in 1888, and the Republicans have elected 150 as against 185 in 1888.

In Iowa, too, the local elections showed decided Democratic gains. For example, in Clinton, the home of Congressman Hayes, the regular Democratic ticket won, although there was an independent Democratic ticket also in the field, and at the last previous election the Republicans won by 699 or 709. Judge Hayes is of the opinion that the tariff had much more to do with those gains than the prohibition question. The latter, he says, was pretty thoroughly discounted before the last elections, and while the opposition to prohibition still adds something to the Democratic strength, most of the late gains he attributes to a marked change in sentiment in his State on the tariff question.

Ayer's Cherry Fectoral possesses powerful healing qualities, which manifest themselves whenever this remedy is employed in colds, coughs, throat or lung troubles. Its anodyne and expectorant effects are promptly realized. It is a chemical success and a medical triumph.

In the Spring Months Nature should be assisted when the system is changing from the fall habit of the winter months to the lighter diet of the warm season. Nothing does this so well as S. S. S. It stimulates the sluggish blood and rids the system of heaviness and the feeling of languor. If there is poison in the blood, it generally shows itself in the spring, and this is the season to help nature to drive it out and be cured.

S. S. S. Beautifies the skin and makes the complexion rosy and healthy. S. S. S. Gives elasticity to the step and buoyant spirits. S. S. S. Makes the feeble and delicate strong and robust. S. S. S. Is a tonic to the whole body and increases vitality. S. S. S. Is a simple vegetable medicine, harmless to the most delicate, yet so powerful as to cleanse the system of all impurities.

Something Must Be Done. (Western Rural.) The Government of the United States, as we have sometimes before said, must give its attention to the deplorable condition of our agriculture. There is nothing about which we sit down to write that so humiliates and dishonors us as the lack of our agricultural prosperity. There always appears to be a hand before us pointing to Ireland when we contemplate American agriculture. Yet this is the grandest agricultural country in the world. Our farmers have built our cities and railroads and telegraph lines and palaces and colleges, and made the America of today the proud, rich, powerful nation that it is. And the men who have made the wealth are themselves poor! How like the world in all the ages past! But in this country justice is supposed ever to be sitting on her throne. But the time is here when radical innovations must be made, though they may shake our prejudices and do violence to our usual mode of thought. We have got into the habit of thinking that government is a sort of ornament. But we must begin to think that it is a thing of utility. For long years the government has assumed the duty of helping to develop our manufactures. The tariff is based upon the theory that it is the right of citizens and its own industries. But if the danger of injury from foreign competition is sufficient to arouse the government to stand at our ports of entry to keep out foreign products, the danger of privileged classes and cut-throat business methods that are now common in the United States, is sufficient to prompt the government to guard our farms from the thieving conspiracies. This government, which costs the farmer so much to support, scarcely turns its hand to help the farmer, and if it goes through the motions of helping him, the result is a barren idealism. Manufacturers and railroads and Wall Street capitalists get pretty nearly everything they want at Washington. As farmers we are asked to pay to support the money sharks of the East; to pay to support every manufacturer in the land; to pay to protect this industry and that industry, and while we are doing this our own business is going to ruin, and the government leaves us to struggle by ourselves. The money lender has his grip upon the throats of the men who have come into the new West to develop farms for the enriching of the nation; his big, grasping claw covers the new West; adversity is upon great numbers of our producers, and it really seems to be getting darker instead of becoming brighter, and what is government doing? It is compelling us to say something upon every necessary of life in order to protect the business of other classes, but is not even leading a willing ear to a description of our condition and the utterance of our demands. Well, what can the government do, do you ask? The answer is that it can do anything that it chooses. It can certainly drive back the horrid corporate corn laws that have fattened for years upon the very lives of our farmers. It can at least exercise police control of thieves in broad-day as well as at night. It can ask what the farmer receives, and can ask what agriculture with all which grass will grow in our streets—requires to make it prosperous; and whatever it needs, this great, rich government can do, and this great, rich government must do. It may be possible that some of the millions that are lying idle in the public treasury will be required to restore prosperity to agriculture. If they are needed, out with them, and set farming upon its feet. The man who does most to make the American government possible must be a chance.

Waked up Effectually. A lethargic, dormant condition of the liver is all too prevalent, with dried catarrhs and nauseous cholagogues. Agenter, pleaster and far more effective means exists of arousing the organ when sometimes this is effected by a speedy and permanent cure, by the medical fraternity, tested by the public for many years. A resumption by the bilious organ of its secretive functions with the activity attendant upon health, a return to regularity of the bowels, and a renewal of digestion, are the no less happy and certain results of using the Bitters systematically. Its laxative effect is never painful and drenching, its tendency being rather to perpetuate regularly than to produce a copious, healthy, and agreeable, healthy, kidney troubles and neuralgia it subdues effectually.

A LITTLE ROMANCE.

Rival Lovers Make a Bet, but the Winner Never Claimed the Stake.

I heard an interesting little romance when I was in Pearsall's the other day which is worth repeating, and shows the spirit that prevailed twenty-five years ago among the young men. Two young men whose names it is unnecessary to give, were suitors for the heart and hand of one fair maiden, and both, in agricultural parlance, seemed to be "hoosing their rows" pretty well. The village society was about evenly divided as to which would get her. To add to the interest of the affair, one of the suitors was a poor young man, while with the other money was no object, and betting was slightly in his favor. The poor man was so confident in his strong love, however, that he met his rival's taunts by offering to wager every dollar he had in the world that he would win the lady. His total earthly possessions amounted to just $40. This amount the rich youth promptly covered, and the money, $80, was placed in the hands of Samuel Combs, of Christian Hook, as stakeholder. Fortune smiled on the fellow who risked all for his love, and he got the girl, and with her a substantial bank account. He considered himself sufficiently blessed by possessing the girl, and as she was well off, he declined to claim his defeated rival's cash, so Mr. Combs, who is now seventy years of age, is still holding the stake. Although a quarter of a century has passed since then, he says he will keep the money until he dies, unless claimed by the winner. The money rests in the leather pocket-book in which Mr. Combs placed it at the time the wager was made, and he has carried it ever since, ready to pay it over at any moment.

What Does that Seem to Indicate? There were 807 votes polled in the Democratic primary and only 623 polled in the Republican primary in Hale county.

The Annexation of Canada. A good deal has been said during the past few years about the annexation of Canada to the United States, but while the matter has been discussed in a patronizing sort of way on this side there has never been anything like a unanimous, or even a very strong desire on the part of any for a consummation. From the other side of the line, however, have come reports that there was such a sentiment and that it was growing. It is now stated that there is a change of sentiment in the Dominion, and that instead of hoping and planning for annexation they are seriously considering the question of seceding from the mother country and setting up a republic after the fashion of the governments of the other divisions and portions of the American continent. In this movement the Canadians will receive the moral support and cordial encouragement of the people of the States, and of the Government at the proper time. There are many reasons why it would not be desirable to have the Dominion attached to and become a part of the United States, but there is no reason why that country should not establish and maintain an independent government. It has ample territory and resources to make it a strong country, and the people have abundant capacity for self-government, and from their long contact with our country they are more familiar with and could with greater ease and less friction, make the comparatively slight changes necessary to constitute a republic instead of a monarchial dependency. Such a transformation will complete the chain of American republics, and with the exception of a few contiguous islands that are still held by foreign powers, will establish home rule throughout the western hemisphere. And such will soon be the case.

A Calloway County Magistrate Orders Two Negroes Whipped and the Constable Does it. (Owensboro Messenger.) The jail at Murray, Calloway county, was forced by the prisoners Saturday night and three robbers, who were the leaders of a gang who stole a whole sackful of flour, made their escape. They are being pursued by hounds. Amosop of the flour they, two negroes who were convicted of being accessories after the fact were sentenced by the rural justice to receive one eighteen lashes and the other fourteen lashes on the bare back. The officiating constable, in palpable violation of the law, which abolished the whipping post in this State years ago, administered the punishment ordered by the court. Both the magistrate and constable will be indicted by the grand jury, and much feeling exists in the county about the matter.

Violent Death of the Apostles. It is generally believed that only one of Christ's apostles, John, escaped martyrdom. Matthew is supposed to have been slain with a sword in Ethiopia. James, son of Zebedee, was beheaded at Jerusalem. James, the brother of our Lord, was thrown from a pinnacle of the Temple and then beaten to death with a fuller's club. Phillip was hurled against a pillar of Hieropolis, a city of Phrygia. Bartholomew was flayed alive at Albanopolis, in Armenia. Andrew suffered martyrdom on a cross at Patras, in Achaia. Thomas was run through the body with a lance at Caromandel, in the East Indies. Thaddeus was shot to death with arrows. Simon Zelotes was crucified in Persia. Peter was crucified, head downward, it is said, during the Neroian persecution. Matthias was first stoned and then beheaded, and Paul was beheaded at Rome by the tyrant Nero. Judas Iscariot, after the betrayal of our Lord, hanged himself.

What Does that Seem to Indicate? There were 807 votes polled in the Democratic primary and only 623 polled in the Republican primary in Hale county.

The Annexation of Canada. A good deal has been said during the past few years about the annexation of Canada to the United States, but while the matter has been discussed in a patronizing sort of way on this side there has never been anything like a unanimous, or even a very strong desire on the part of any for a consummation. From the other side of the line, however, have come reports that there was such a sentiment and that it was growing. It is now stated that there is a change of sentiment in the Dominion, and that instead of hoping and planning for annexation they are seriously considering the question of seceding from the mother country and setting up a republic after the fashion of the governments of the other divisions and portions of the American continent. In this movement the Canadians will receive the moral support and cordial encouragement of the people of the States, and of the Government at the proper time. There are many reasons why it would not be desirable to have the Dominion attached to and become a part of the United States, but there is no reason why that country should not establish and maintain an independent government. It has ample territory and resources to make it a strong country, and the people have abundant capacity for self-government, and from their long contact with our country they are more familiar with and could with greater ease and less friction, make the
